

Impact Week is a non-profit program, which unites people from a variety of countries to develop sustainable business models using Design Thinking. In our "Train the Trainer" sessions, we enable University lecturers and corporates as Design Thinking coaches.

In addition, in the actual "Impact Week" we help students in host countries around the world to develop new business ideas.

Masterthesis – Impact Study (m/f/d)

What will keep you challenged:

- Interviews with key stakeholders will be conducted to jointly define the scope of work
- To develop a measurement approach that captures the impact on the various roles.
- Based on this qualitative/quantitative information, indicators will be developed that can serve to capture the impact on varying levels.
- The thesis will be supervised by Prof. Laura Marie Edinger-Schons.

Which traits contribute to your success:

- Empathic personality with strong communication skills
- Driven personality eager to deliver the best outcomes, even in a fast-paced environment
- Eager to adjust to changing circumstances and an unfamiliar environment
- High intercultural competence

What you need to bring:

- Professional experience in the training environment (advisory, strategy, coordination)
- Innovative thinking and agility
- Teamplayer qualities and communication strength
- Reporting and data analysis skills

Your benefits:

- Join an Impact Week on site in Q4/2019 (either Nepal or Jordan)

- Work with an international team of volunteers
- Flexible work location (remote or at Lufthansa in Frankfurt)
- Make your dent in the world

Do you want to be part of the Impact Week?

Learn more at <https://www.impactweek.net>

✉ Please send your application to jens.unger@dlh.de

